

THE STORY
REPUBLIC

Thirteen Jollifs & Other Stories

Tales of Liskeard, Looe & Polperro

THE THIRTEEN JOLLIFS by Jowan Jacobs

In little Cornish villages like Polperro no surname is unique and it gets really quite confusing. Especially if you're the new postman. William Cooper slid a letter through Mr Joliff's letterbox. Job done.

However, Mr Joliff soon realised that the letter wasn't intended for him and, with slight embarrassment for knowing its contents, swiftly delivered it to his friend John Joliff. By the end of the week it had passed through thirteen Households.

So you can imagine the faces of Charlie Joliff and Evie Bowden when the whole village turned up to watch them 'secretly' sail away together.

Polperro

Supported using public funding by
ARTS COUNCIL ENGLAND

KEAP

thewritersblock.org.uk/the-story-republic